

Spring 5-26-2014

Collaboration in Cambodia: Are anti-trafficking agencies working together?

Heather Richardson

SIT Graduate Institute, Hrichie728@gmail.com

Follow this and additional works at: <http://digitalcollections.sit.edu/capstones>

Recommended Citation

Richardson, Heather, "Collaboration in Cambodia: Are anti-trafficking agencies working together?" (2014). Capstone Collection. Paper 2676.

This Thesis (Open Access) is brought to you for free and open access by the SIT Graduate Institute at DigitalCollections@SIT. It has been accepted for inclusion in Capstone Collection by an authorized administrator of DigitalCollections@SIT. For more information, please contact digitalcollections@sit.edu.

HEATHER RICHARDSON
CAPSTONE ABSTRACT
05-19-14

ABSTRACT

This study examined the presence and effectiveness of partnerships among anti trafficking agencies in Cambodia. Local NGOs and government ministries were questioned on a variety of topics including the scope of their agencies strategic goals as well as the number of partnerships they hold. I applied a biology based theory, Systems Theory, to my research in order to highlight the importance of collaboration. Based on a lack of respondents to my questionnaire, the information gathered from participating agencies, and literary research, I conclude that partnerships among stakeholders in the anti trafficking field in Cambodia are deficient, but that is not to say they are all together non-existent. While my sample size was limited, I was able to create a foundation for further research. Two examples of highly functioning NGOs are used to make specific recommendations to other NGOs in the field. In addition, recommendations are made to the RGC emphasizing the need for a more organized authority.